AVENUE—and a few of our friends, among them Brack Capital Real Estate, the developer of 90 Morton and Reuveni Real Estate, the development's exclusive sales and marketing team—gathered at 90 Morton Street last night to celebrate our spring Philanthropy issue and the launch of 90 Morton.

Throughout the evening, over 300 guests weaved their way through the sales gallery that also serves as an art space. It served as the art opening location for Danielle Gottesman's exhibition, "Elevations," curated by Lolita Cros. Elevations includes five unique sculptures that were inspired by 90 Morton's architectural plans.

Danielle's beautiful crafted photography of the West Village and construction shots are also on display in the sales gallery and show the transformation of the development.

DJ Super Dave from Allen Dalton Productions spun an eclectic playlist that had guests bopping all night long.

Shlomi Reuveni, Sarit Holzmänn, Beth Fisher, Dan August Cordeiro, Elizabeth Ann Kivlan, Ron Fiamma, Anna Brusco, Wendy Maitland, Leonard Steinberg, Toni Haber, Consuelo Vanderbilt Costin, Elyn Wollensky and Mark Freiser and Maria and Ken Fishel were among the attendees.
